Step-by-step plan for designing your sleeve in InDesign

1. Your sleeve will be printed with CMYK colours. Make sure the colour profile of your design is set to CMYK. Images, logos, or photos should also be in the CMYK colour profile.
2. Do not place text or images where it says 'adhesive edge'.
3. Let the background of your design run all the way to the red edges of the bleed.
4. Make sure that all text has been converted into outlines and that all images have been placed. Outlining text? Then select the text and go to text/letter outlines or press command/shift/o.
5. Is your design finished? Then you can export it to a PDF document.
 - Make sure the layer with the fold lines and instructions is off. Only your own design should be visible, not the lines and areas from the working drawing.
 - Then save it as a PDF /X-1a:2001 and set the compatibility to Acrobat 5 (PDF 1.4).
 - Under characters and bleed area, tick the document's bleed area settings. If the settings change to 2 x 5 mm, you'll be fine.
6. Check the check! You're almost there. Check your PDF design on the following points:
 - The PDF design contains only 1 page. Do you have 10 different designs? Then it will be 10 different PDF designs.
 - The PDF design is 120 x 314 mm (incl. 5 mm bleed all around).
 - Only your own design is visible in the PDF design. The layer with fold lines and info is thus turned off.
 - The PDF design contains no white borders, crop marks, crop crosses, etc.
